

MobilePA

● There are several devices that allow you to receive email on the move but MobilePA does far more than this. For a start, it's not a device but a software interface that runs on the majority of mobile phones and PDAs. As well as email, it allows users to access data from back-office systems, such as payroll and HR management applications, and its developer, Sirenic, says it can work with content from most systems. The other clever bit is that it can prioritise information sent to you, courtesy of a user knowledge base built up on the Sirenic server. MobilePA also has a voice facility for reading out emails. The service can be tailored for individual users through to large workforces at major corporates Cost From £10 per month Website www.sirenic.com

